

"Gypsy" Evangelist Smith Writes Special Sermon for the Boston American.

There are people who would sit in committee and dictate to the Son of God whom He is to save.—Gypsy Smith.

'GOD' I GIVE EVERY MAN A CHANCE'

"If You and I Had the Eyes of Christ We Should See in the Filthiest Wretch That Walks the Street Something Worth Saving."

By Gypsy Smith.

Famous English Evangelist Now Preaching in Boston.

"And as Jesus passed by, He saw a man called Matthew sitting at the place of toll. And He saith unto him, follow Me. And He arose and followed him."—Matt., ix. 9.

THESE days are so momentous to the people of Boston and New England as was the day when Jesus and Matthew met, and for all who have eyes and ears and mind and heart to catch the psychological moment there is a mass of spiritual life and health and salvation to be had for Matthew, for surely no one can see these great gatherings in Tremont Temple day by day without feeling that Jesus of Nazareth is passing by.

The text I have chosen in Matthew's modest way of telling all generations how he was converted, Matthew could have made great deal more of that epoch-making moment in his life. Sometimes I think when he wrote just as much as my text he would not write any more that day.

Can you now imagine the things that a story is worth? He does not even tell you that he lived in a big house. He does not tell you that he made a big man. He does not tell you that he lived all his friends to come and meet with Jesus at the feast. He leaves others to tell you that bit of the story. He simply says there was a feast. Very modest is Matthew. He says Jesus saw a man, and saith unto him, follow Me; and this man followed; and that is all.

The Wonderful Moment When Gospels Were Born.

There is an earnestness about our life which cannot be put to tell all the story. We keep something back, we guard trust ourselves to tell only the story. There are pages in every life that will never be written. There are stories which in mortal eye could not be told. There are moments when only the sky and the sun, the moon and the stars, the birds and the flowers, and the heaven itself can tell of it, just a little bit of it.

It was on this day that the wonderful moment in which history began to breathe, a moment when in his soul there was placed the germ that will make heaven rejoice with his fall. It was a wonderful moment in his life when he saw Jesus standing before him, speaking to him as a man with a man's voice, appealing to him.

Why should Jesus go to this man? Because this man needed Jesus. I believe down to this day's hour he was looking for Christ. I am not so sure that he had not found John the Baptist preacher. I am not so sure that he had not found John a converted sinner. I am not so sure that he had not heard John say, "He hold the Lamb of God."

There were moments in his life when he longed to see a look at that dear face, to hear the words of that voice, and catch some inspiration from life-giving message and to feel the touch that blessed. And I can imagine that even that day he could not see his look for Jesus.

Followed Jesus Without a Question.

He was at his business, you remember; he sat at the place of toll, everything in front of him, and while he was thinking of the inward longings, while the money was passing, while the man with him was talking to him and setting in mortal thought and feelings that were eternal, I can imagine him saying, "Why, shall I ever see Him?"

And maybe he laid his hand on his hands and at that moment Jesus said: "Matthew, Matthew, follow Me."

And Jesus said: "Follow Me." He did it instantly, without asking a question, without hesitation. He acted as though he had made his plans as to what he would do for the day. He left all. He does not tell you that he was leaving, while the man with him was talking to him and setting in mortal thought and feelings that were eternal, I can imagine him saying, "Why, shall I ever see Him?"

Not a Good Desire or Thought but to God-Given.

And listen to me. There never is a good desire, there never is a noble thought, there never will be an aspiration for a better life, but what is God-given and God-inspired.

He knows. And he knows where you sit, my brother. There is a man handi-capped, a Jew in an earthly prison, a man who is nobly waiting, attracted to his very profession, separated from decent folk by his calling, unpopular and hated.

There he was; he never had a chance. The church did not want him, but Jesus Christ took the trouble to save him. The church of his day did not want him, but Jesus Christ took the trouble to save him. The church of his day did not want him, but Jesus Christ took the trouble to save him.

Christ Means a Chance for Every Man.

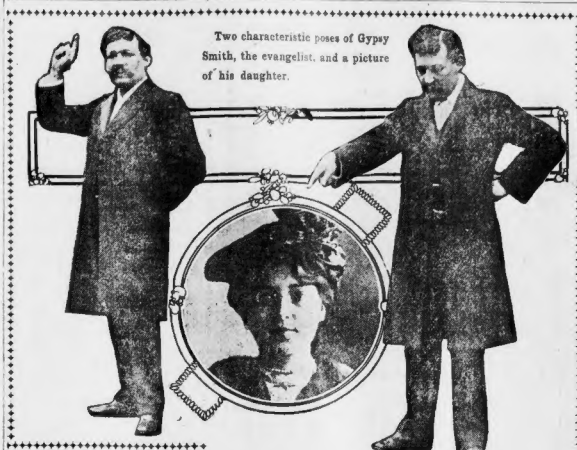

And when I think of it and look at some people, the wonder to me is that they are not more than they are. Did have pity on the boys and girls in the world who are made slaves before they are a year old. God gave you the child life of today. The work Jesus does.

And He chooses to find out about these people, the people that nobody wants, and He says: "I want you; I am after you." It is a new way of treating sinners. In you see think of it. A new way of treating sinners, wrongdoers. Prison for wrongdoers, the law courts for wrongdoers; the whole fabric of society is built up of wrongdoers, the whole of our civilization is a structure of wrongdoers, and yet Jesus Christ comes and opens His arms to them and says: "Come to Me; I will receive you."

That is the Christ for me? That is the Christ for every man there is a chance. The Christ I have to preach gives a chance to the worst, in the most unlikely, to the most degraded, to the most hated, to the most sinful, to the most despised, to the people who were born into the world with the devil in their blood, the blood of a sinner in their veins, the blood of the harlot in their veins.

WROTE AGAIN BELIEF THAT HE STOLE HORSE AT SOUTH ORRINGTON, THEN ABANDONED IT.

WILL KEEP UP PURSUIT

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, Nov. 24.—The pursuers of Minor M. Clair Francis, the money hunter, today found traces of the desperate when word reached the station that the stable of a farmer named Gales Kent of South Orrington had been broken into during the night, a horse stolen and ridden back some distance and then abandoned.

Mr. Kent had concealed his horse, and the robber used a head halter for a lead and pulled up the halter in a sudden move.

The horse returned today at 6 o'clock, a messenger of the halter owner in a light-colored riding, having the appearance that he had been driven many miles.

Last night a little girl in West Worcester, Mass., saw a man answering Francis' description, and she told her mother of the man's appearance.

The girl said that the man had been seen in the stable of a farmer named Gales Kent of South Orrington, and that he had been seen in the stable of a farmer named Gales Kent of South Orrington.

MYSTERIOUSLY COUSIN SWAYED

SWEETLY SCENTED EPISTLES TO MAN WHO IS CHARGED WITH GRACE BROWN'S DEATH.

HERKIMER, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Charles Gillette, on trial here charged with the murder of Grace Brown, has an unknown woman adviser. Each day the prisoner receives sweet-scented notes signed "Marguerite." No one knows who this mysterious woman is. Often she sends magazines and books to Gillette, and on one of her letters she hinted that power of influence would be exerted to obtain the acquittal of the prisoner.

The defense hoped to show that the addresses on the girls' hand were raised by being looked over the letter of the girls' hand.

It was found today that a woman named Margaret, who was a friend of the prisoner, had written the letters.
